

Campaign Director - National Disability Insurance Scheme

- Key role to create major social and economic reform (on par with Medicare and compulsory superannuation)
- Full time fixed term through June 2012
- Attractive salary package

On behalf of an alliance of people with disability, family carers and service providers, National Disability Services wishes to employ a Director to organise the campaign to persuade the Australian Government to establish a National Disability Insurance Scheme. The campaign will be rolled out in a public policy environment in which many issues will compete for Government's attention.

The Director will be able to build significant support within the disability sector and more importantly, outside the sector, to ensure the success of this initiative.

Skills and background required for this role include:

- Superior relationship and influencing skills and a deep understanding of the Australian political and regulatory environment
- Experience in coordinating a national public affairs campaign on complex policy issues involving multiple stakeholders and/or track record in successful political campaigns
- High energy and drive plus strong communication and writing skills
- Ability to build, lead and mentor a team and thrive under pressure are vital to the role.

National Disability Services (NDS) is the national industry association for disability services, representing 700 organisations. Collectively, members operate several thousand services for Australians with all types of disability in every State and Territory across Australia.

Further details about this exciting opportunity can be obtained from the Consultants assisting NDS through Angela Livingston on (02) 9994 8998. Candidates are invited to address the role criteria and submit a detailed resume to: angela.livingston@thirdsectorpeople.com.au

NDS is an equal opportunity employer and encourages applications from people with disability.
